TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Saint Joseph's University

Adjunct Instructor – “Craft of Language” 2019-2020 My approach for Craft of Language involved engaging students with the study of Rhetoric and Composition and Poetry through active learning, discussion, and student-centered assignments including a career exploration paper and multi-modal poetry assignment. I also designed and coded a course website to provide students with a welcoming learning platform and online community via blogs.

Stockton University

Adjunct Instructor – “Introduction to Research” Spring 2015 My approach for Introduction to Research involved a 'Quest for Knowledge' theme and gamification elements which I incorporated into a custom website I built for the course. The site also featured a digitally-enhanced syllabus, reading schedule with links to readings and embedded tutorials, and an assignment submission form.

Adjunct Instructor – “College Writing” Fall 2014 My approach for College Writing involved assignments tied to relevant issues/events, knowledge creation via an online community, and lectures on both academic and real-world writing skills (i.e. resume writing).

Atlantic Cape Community College

Information Literacy Instructor 2011-2013 I created and provided Information Literacy workshops and Library Orientation sessions to classes at the college. I typically provided workshops to English classes. Drawing on my English background and growing Information Literacy knowledge, I designed custom workshops that taught research skills related to individual assignments.

Adjunct Instructor – “Introduction to Literature 2009-2013 My approach for Introduction to Literature involved fostering an understanding and appreciation for diverse forms of literature. This was achieved through selecting diverse texts, teaching about literary forms and critical approaches to literature, and assigning papers and projects that asked students to apply skills and approaches to gain a better understanding of texts.

Adjunct Instructor – “English Composition I” 2009-2013 My approach for English Composition I involved selection of readings that pertained to relevant/current topics, rhetorical analysis of texts and extraction of writing techniques, and gradual application of rhetorical skills to writing assignments.

Camden County College

Adjunct Instructor – “Reading II” and “Reading III” 2009-2011 In Reading II and III, I taught progressively-critical reading skills and my approach involved choosing provocative readings and using supplemental materials including multimedia to engage students with texts. Mastery of critical reading was achieved by regularly analyzing texts through a variety of assignments.

Adjunct Instructor – “Writing II” and “Writing III” 2009-2011 In Writing II and III, I taught students the single and five paragraph essay format, and my approach involved choosing interesting/relevant articles for rhetorical analysis, conducting workshops on grammar and writing skills, and having students continuously improve their work, leading ultimately to a Final Portfolio of their best work. The department-wide Portfolio Assessment & Mentoring Program won an Honorable Mention in the 2010 Diana Hacker Award for outstanding programs in English at Two-Year Colleges.
